very much regretted to hear this war discussed in a par-tisate spirit. There was a time when there were no par-tise in regard to the war, and he believed that now the people were, without distinction, true to the government when the real issue was presented of whether this go-vernment should live or die, and a military despotsion he erected on its ruins. If the people, for any cause, should fall to support the government, and the Southern general erected on its ruins. If the people, for any cause, about fail to support the government, and the Southern conied-oracy was established, it needed no prophet to foreteil the result. Appeals would be made, first, to the border States to join them, and then to Pennsylvania and Indiana, by peonising them a monopoly of manufacturing, and, under the lead of each democrats as James Buchanae, an effort would be made to compel these States to go into that confederacy. He believed this to be the original conspiracy to which James Buchanae was a partner, and the friend of Buchanan, Judge Black, has said that, iff the South went, the State of Pennsylvania would go with them.

conspiracy to which James Buchanan was a partner, and the friend of Buchanan, Judge Black, has said that, if the South went, the State of Pennsylvania would go with them.

Mr. Rick, (opp.) of Minn., asked the Senator if he would express his opinion of Horace Greeley.

Mr. Doourrus said he was perfectly willing to express his opinion. He regarded the course of the New York Tribure in lecember, 1869, and also the course pursued by that paper latterly, as among the most unfortunate of occurrences and most mischvious in its tendency. The New York Harald was regarded as the organ of the democratic party, and day after day that paper was saying to the people of the South—"If you go out of the Uniou, and the friends of Mr. Lincols shall undertake to force the people to submit to his authority the democracy of the North will rise in arms, and no republican soldier shalf ever be permitted to leave his State." This was the language of the Henatin until those at the South believed that the democracy of the North would light against their country, and that, if there was a civil war it would be in the free states. The New York Tribune, at the same time, almost equally unfortunate, said.—"If they want to go, let then go." Here was a civil war it would be in the free states. The New York Tribune, at the same time, almost equally unfortunate, said.—"If you go, the republicans will not fight you." These two breases, working upon the minds of the accessionists, made them believe that they could enter upon and carry through their attempt to reconstruct the Union without any war.

Mr. Laraux, (opp.) of Cal., raised the point that the discussion was out of order. The question was out of order. The question was out of order. The postion on the oundant of the Secretary of State in sending the French Minister to Richards.
